Called to Serve

Let us praise Israel's Lone Soldiers from Detroit.

Vivian Henoch | Special to the Jewish News

On Yom HaZikaron, this year on May 11, we stand with Israel in remembrance of soldiers who have fallen in battle or in acts of terror. It is also a time to reflect with pride on Jewish Detroit's own Lone Soldiers — sons and daughters of our community — who bravely have chosen to protect and defend Israel with their young lives. We thank them for their service and pray for their safe return to their families.

Last year, they were students carrying book bags. This year, they are Israeli soldiers carrying the responsibility of defending our Jewish State. What steely resolve does it take to endure grueling training in the desert, to learn the vocabulary of artillery in Hebrew, to become soldiers among the elite in the Israeli Defense Forces (IDF)? Through their parents' eyes and words, we meet four extraordinary young men and women who have chosen to challenge mind, body and spirit as volunteer soldiers in Israel. As Lone Soldiers — the IDF term for recruits from abroad and without family in Israel — they serve shoulder-to-shoulder with native Israelis to keep Israel safe.

Shimmy Cohen

SHIMMY COHEN
AGE 21
WEST BLOOMFIELD
STARTED HIS SERVICE IN NOVEMBER 2014

Shimmy attended Akiva Hebrew Day until the 10th grade, then continued his education at Oakland Early College. Compelled to serve at an early age, he moved to Israel to spend a gap year on a kibbutz in 2013, then joined the Israel Defense Forces (IDF) the following year.

Trained as a sniper in the Givati Brigade — an infantry unit of the IDF that serves as its amphibious force (designated by its purple berets), Shimmy has spent much of the last seven months in Israel's "hot spots." When his enlistment ends in December 2016, he plans to make aliyah and finish his bachelor's degree in criminology at Bar-Ilan University in Tel Aviv with the goal of completing a master's in counter-terrorism at the IDC Herziliya.

As his mother, Shainde Braunstein, describes, "When Shimmy told us that he was intending to serve in Israel, our first reaction was just immense pride. We raised our children to love Israel and they have had opportunities to visit and to study in Israel, so we felt he clearly had understood that message."

"Of course, at the time he made his decision, his service was fairly theoretical to us. The hard part for us now is knowing that his job puts him in danger every day. It is a comfort to us to realize that he is actively defending the Jewish state and his people, and we just feel tremendously privileged to be his parents."
